THE PARTICIPANT OBSERVER

Edited by GLENN JACOBS

A collection of studies that fills the gap between the fragmented text/book of readings and the full-length monograph, containing twelve in-depth descriptive pieces by "participant observers" on social contexts and milieus, with major sections devoted to social problems, leisure and natural groups, and careers and occupations. With an introduction, "On Context and Relevance," by Alfred McClung Lee.

MULTIVALENT MAN

by ALFRED MCCLUNG LEE

"An excellent scholarly treatise . . . a mature and provocative analysis of the conditions of modern life."
—Herbert Blumer, University of California.

447 pp. Notes. Index. Cloth $7.95, Paper $3.95

THE LOST SCIENCE OF MAN

by ERNEST BECKER

Two extended essays: "The Tragic Paradox of Albion Small and American Social Science" and "Sketch for a Critical History of Anthropology."

"If we bring Albion Small forward after almost a half-century of neglect," writes Dr. Becker, "it is because he has something very vital to tell us about the shape of our science in the second half of the 20th century. . . . His career brings out in full relief the whole problem of the meaning of sociology and its failure to be socially relevant in spite of its unprecedented achievement as an objective science." In the second essay, Dr. Becker brings to bear on the discipline of anthropology the basic perspective of his book The Structure of Evil. Coming, March 1971.

192 pp. Notes. Index. Cloth $6.95, Paper $2.95

BEYOND ALIENATION

A Philosophy of Education for the Crisis of Democracy

by ERNEST BECKER

"The most unique aspect of this book is the way in which the author has cast developments in sociology, anthropology, psychology and psychiatry into a refreshing perspective on man."—The Annals. (American Academy of Political and Social Science)

320 pp. Notes. Index. Cloth $6.95, Paper $2.95

THE STRUCTURE OF EVIL

An Essay on the Unification of the Science of Man

by ERNEST BECKER

"Becker joins a growing group of thinkers who are or were concerned with the relationship of history and philosophy to social science and with the cleavage between fact and value. . . . [His] book could not be more timely. It engages the reader. Its themes are essential for contemporary sociology."—American Sociological Journal.

448 pp. Notes. Index. $8.50

ANGEL IN ARMOR

A Post-Freudian Perspective on the Nature of Man

by ERNEST BECKER

"In addition to his rare ability to make classical knowledge and concerns relevant to a young activist generation, Ernest Becker possesses a mind as comfortable with philosophy and literature as it is with psychology."—New York Times Book Review

208 pp. $5.95

IMAGES OF MAN

The Classic Tradition in Sociological Thinking

Selected and edited with an introduction by
C. WRIGHT MILLS

Now in its seventh printing, here are the key ideas that affect our social thinking today, the "classic" documents that "have continued to be a point of orientation for the work of others": Marx and Engels, On Class and On Alienation; Spencer, The Class Bias and Militant and Industrial Societies; Mannheim, The Prospects of Scientific Politics and Types of Rationality and Organized Insecurity; Weber, Class, Status, Party and Bureaucracy; Mosca, The Ruling Class; Michels, The Iron Law of Oligarchy; Pareto, Elites, Force and Governments; Simmel, The Metropolis and Mental Life; Durkheim, On Anomie; Thomas and Znaniecki, Three Types of Personality; Veblen, The Main Drift; Schumpeter, On Capitalism; Lippmann, The World Outside and the Pictures in Our Heads.

534 pp. Index. $7.50

THE CONSCIENCE OF THE CITY

Edited by MARTIN MEYERSON

In this volume, the authors stress the rising set of concerns for people rather than things, for the here and now rather than for a far future, for direct involvement of those affected by urban policies rather than for delegation to government experts.

VIOLENT CRIME

Homicide, Assault, Rape, Robbery

The Report of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence

With an introduction: "Toward a National Urban Policy" by Daniel P. Moynihan. The most important of all the reports released by the Commission, in the opinion of its chairman, Milton S. Eisenhower.

88 pp. Cloth $3.00, Paper $1.25

THE RSVP CYCLES

Creative Processes in the Human Environment

The noted environmentalist, planner, and landscape architect, Lawrence Halprin, writes of a new creative approach in which architecture, urban planning, social structures, and design can be correlated into an environment which is planned but which at the same time allows for human diversity and freedom. The author posits a continual cycle of interrelating activities: Resources, Scores, Valuation, and Performance. Scores, the crux of creativity, are processes that extend over time. Thus, city plans, building designs, choreography, and freeways are all scores that form the emotional and kinetic environment within which we add the creative "input" of our lives and artistic contributions. "This vivid book is an original work of striking clarity and force. It should become a handbook for the environmentalists of tomorrow."—Stewart L. Udall, former Secretary of the Interior.

GENERAL SYSTEM THEORY

Foundations, Development, Applications

by LUDWIG VON BERTALANFFY

Systems science and related developments in computer technology, cybernetics, automation, and systems engineering have rapidly become part of every established university curriculum. Ludwig von Bertalanffy, world-renowned biologist and founder of the General System Theory, offers here an authoritative introduction to one of the most important theoretical and methodological reorientations in contemporary physical, biological, behavioral, and social sciences.

ROBOTS, MEN AND MINDS

Psychology in the Modern World

by LUDWIG VON BERTALANFFY

"This is the best short exposition I know of post-mechanistic biology. . . . Dr. Bertalanffy was not only an early exponent of a systems theory in biology, but he is one of those pioneers who, following Lloyd Morgan and Whitehead, have demonstrated that organisms must be interpreted primarily in organic, not in mechanical, terms, and man himself as a symbol-making rather than a merely tool-making animal."—Lewis Mumford

THE AMERICAN CULTURE

Series Editor: NEIL HARRIS

Volume Editors: JOHN DEMOS (Brandeis), GORDON S. WOOD (Brown), DAVID GRIMSTED (Maryland), ALAN TRACHTENBERG (Yale), NEIL HARRIS (Chicago), RODERICK NASH (California), ROBERT SKLAR (Michigan), WARREN SUSMAN (Rutgers).

The source materials, both textual and visual, in this attractive new series, are related to three principal areas in American life: (1) The Arts, not merely formal but all areas which have brought entertainment, instruction, or inspiration to the American people—motion pictures, radio, television, industrial design, cartooning, song-writing, advertising, fashions, etc.; (2) Changing patterns of work and leisure, the development of new occupations and professions, the destruction of older human tasks, the search and justification for novel amusements and diversions; (3) Our changing physical environment, the way Americans have adjusted to the rapid transformations of our land, our sky, our air and water; our steamboats, trains, automobiles, and planes; our highways, cities, parks, and telephones as products of our attitudes to comfort, speed, and sensations. How values and objects intersect to help form the character of our culture.

No activity has been considered too minor, no achievement too exotic, to be included: magazine articles, diaries, trial transcripts, letters, newspapers, travel books, short stories, autobiographies, advertisements, sermons—in short everything which preserves the vividness of human activities even while indicating more abstract values and goals.

The raw data, however, are not sufficient for the task of cultural reconstruction. Each editor has organized his material around definitions and assumptions which he explores in the volume introductions. These introductions are essays in their own right; they can be read along with the documents, or they can stand as independent explorations into social history. Together with the texts and illustrations, these volumes represent a unified effort to restore to historical study the texture of life as it was lived, without sacrificing theoretical rigor or informed scholarship.
